ENEL BECOMES THE FIRST BUSINESS GROUP IN PERU'S ELECTRICAL SECTOR TO OBTAIN ANTI-BRIBERY CERTIFICATE

- The Enel Group certified seven of its companies in Peru and reaffirmed its commitment to the fight against corruption from the private sector.

Lima, February 20th, 2020.- Seven companies from the Enel Group in Peru obtained the ISO 37001 certification, an international standard that recognizes companies that have and implement a robust anti-bribery management system. With this recognition, granted for the first time to companies in the electricity sector in Peru, Enel seeks to promote anti-bribery practices in the business sector.

After evaluating the anti-bribery policies of the Enel Group throughout 2019, the RINA and AENOR certifiers granted ISO 37001 Anti-bribery Management System to seven Enel Group companies in Peru, these being: Enel Distribución Perú SAA, Enel Generación Perú SAA (Thermal), Enel Generación Perú S.A.A. (Renewables), Enel Green Power Perú S.A.C., Energética Monzón S.A.C., Proyectos y Soluciones Renovables S.A.C.; and Chinango S.A.C.

“Before applying for the ISO 37001, the Enel Peru Group already had Integrated Management Systems and policies that included a zero-tolerance component in cases of bribery, because ethics is a fundamental pillar of our work. This certification allows us to strengthen the trust we have built with all our stakeholders and continue to contribute with transparency to the continuous improvement of the Peruvian electrical sector”, said José Manuel Revuelta, Country Manager of Enel Peru.

With this certification, the Enel Group in Peru follows in the footsteps of the subsidiaries in Argentina, Chile, and Colombia, which already have the recognition.
